Sparkling Imagination with Felt Toys from Jessica Peck

Question: How do you get kids to turn off the tech and turn on the imagination?

Answer: Felt food patterns from Jessica Peck of Sweetie Pie Bakery. Get the adventure started with this WoolFelt®

3D Campfire. It has hot dogs with slots to roast them, buns, graham crackers, chocolate squares, melted marshmallows, whole marshmallows with slots to roast, and toasted marshmallows with roasting slots!

More projects are available in her book, Felt Toys for Little Ones, published by C&T Publishing. No batteries required with these projects because the toys are MADE to play! There are 75 patterns to spark creative play from a charming tea party and delicious ice cream shop to an adventuresome teepee. The fun-worthy projects in this book will ignite imagination and provide hours of open-ended play. Perfect portable take-along projects!

Happy Glampers travel along with these chic projects!

Commemorating camping adventures is not only a hot trend this summer, but all year long. As designers everywhere exclaim, projects appealing to camping chic are some of this year's best sellers. Felt is a great fit for most of these projects because although it stitches well in a machine, it is also great for hand sewing making it an ideal project to stitch up while on the road.

Jennifer Heynen strives to create happy, colorful projects for the beginner to intermediate sewer. These are great kits to take on the go and packaged attractively for gift giving.

has the perfect applique project to accessorize your home on wheels.

This is the second version of designer Pam Bocko's popular Home Sweet Home pattern.

Pam redesigned the applique wall hanging using WoolFelt® mixed with batik fabric. "Instead of sewing the felt pieces together, I applied fusible web and fused them to a large background piece of felt. Then I did a decorative edge stitching. This eliminated the bulk the two layers of felt sewn," explains Pam. "I used polyester
