Quilt Markets and the now Creativation Expo (formally CHA/HIA) over twenty years ago. Since that time, felt has reemerged from a disposable craft product to a treasured art material used in heirloom and modern fiber art.

"We are excited to continue serving these creative industries with felt products so diverse that one is used in textile fiber art and another in a hands-on teaching project," said Centofanti. "With felt, the possibilities are limitless for both do-it-yourself projects and finished goods. We continue to listen to our customers and create felt from fibers and fiber blends ideally suited to their unique needs and in colors they love."

2017 SPRING QUILT MARKET

Now for another fun phenomenon that is both nostalgic and new each year, the International Spring Quilt Market! This show is nostalgic for National Nonwoovens because we have exhibited for over two decades and have developed many wonderful friendships with fellow exhibitors, designers, and customers. ## RETRO WoolFelt FREE PROJECTS

By Kathleen Berlew, KBB Crafts & Stitches

Talented designer Kathleen Berlew loves paying tribute to all things retro that have become cool again. She often shares on her blog, www.kbbcrafts.blogspot.com as free projects! Here are two:

Miniature robots ornament or keychain (Feb. 2017). Inspiration for this project came from Kathleen's love for 1950s sci-fi movies. Hang the bots on a bulletin board, backpack, or decorate an older child's bedroom.

Pink Retro Telephone Pillow (April 2017). A throwback to the '70s, the decade of avocado appliances and pastel telephones.

Miniature robots originally published in the Better Homes & Gardens Special Interest Quilts and More magazine.
